Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

1. How does the Salice Pacta system differ from standard flap stays?

Standard flap stays often require side-mounted cables or pistons that take up internal cabinet space and can be visually distracting. Salice Pacta is a compact, self-supporting hinge system. It eliminates the need for extra cables, and unlike standard stays, it ensures the door and cabinet base are perfectly flush when open, creating a continuous flat work surface.

2. Is the Light Grey cover set compatible with handle-less "Push-to-Open" cabinets?

Yes. Whether you are using the Pacta Soft-Close or the Pacta Push-to-Open version, these covers are designed to fit the standard hinge body without interfering with the opening mechanism.

3. Do I need tools to install these covers?

No. These covers are designed for snap-on installation. Once your hinges are adjusted and the security screws are tightened, the covers simply click onto the hinge arm and the cup for a finished look.

4. Why choose Pacta covers over leaving the hardware exposed?

While the Pacta hardware is engineering-grade, the covers provide a "furniture-grade" finish. They protect the mechanism from dust and debris while ensuring that when the door is open (and acting as a desk or shelf), the hardware blends into the background of the cabinetry.

5. Can I use these covers for doors wider than 900mm?

For doors wider than 900mm, Salice recommends a central hinge. While this specific set covers the two main side hinges, you may need an additional single cover cap if you are utilising a third central support hinge.
